

Exclusive Membership offer for Campden Wealth members

Enquire Now 01753 476348

Register Now >>

Sir Richard Branson on investing outside of his Virgin Group

GRASP THE NETTLE TO SECURE THE FUTURE OF YOUR FAMILY BUSINESS

ARTICLE | 26 OCTOBER, 2017 04:00 PM | BY ROSALYN BREEDY

With only one-in-eight family businesses making it to the third generation, what is the secret of their success? Rosalyn Breedy, corporate solicitor at Wedlake Bell, has been advising family dynasties for more than 25 years and shares a few of her observations.

Inertia is a company's biggest enemy. Unfortunately, family businesses are prone to dragging their feet when it comes to key strategic decisions about succession planning, but a failure to address deep-seated problems such as ageing directors, requirements for external skills, how to transfer control and poor communication are at the root of most family business fractures.

I have seen too many families send their children to top universities, encouraging them to obtain business-relevant qualifications and experience in fields such as finance, marketing and operations, only to see these bright and eminently-qualified adult children being left on the side-lines and excluded from decision making.

The head of every family business must make one crucially important decision about the future of the business. Does it want to focus on growth and then be sold or listed on the public markets or not? If the owner decides not to plan for an exit event, then he or she needs to think about how to ensure that the business will generate enough consistent revenue to pay the family dividends as well as fairly compensating the non-family executives.

If the business is to be sold or listed, then share option plans will be needed to align the interests of the executives with the family and the family will need to reinvest serious profits back into the business.

The shareholders' agreement will need to address the timing and nature of sale or admission to listing and the sale contract should deal with protection of employees' pensions and jobs, the use of the family name and legacy, restrictive covenants, apportionment of liabilities and nature of consideration.

A key mistake to avoid, which I have seen too often, is when families go through the motions of succession planning, engaging in protracted stakeholder engagement processes which give equal weight to the views of those family members who did not, or would no longer, work in the business compared to those who would be shouldering the burden of the business in the future.

If the business is to succeed, then serious thought needs to go into the development and incentivisation of future leaders who can come from within the family or outside.

Family benefits and dividend income can then be mediated through a structure separate from the business.

Owners need to recognise that failing to address the difficult issues does not mean that a business continues in stasis. Family businesses like all systems are either growing and moving forward or slowly dying.

A failing family business does its family a massive disservice if its end comes about from a loss of value or a fire sale on the death of the owner.

A family business that does not have a clear strategy for how it will pass from one generation to another is also at risk of losing top talent and strategic contracts as people assume the worst and make alternative career plans.

The main reason for failure to plan for succession is really a strategic one. Although such decisions can be difficult for family business owners, a trusted lawyer or accountant with experience of succession planning will be able to guide the leaders and mediate when conflict arises between different stakeholders.

The key is not to procrastinate indefinitely—grasping the nettle may involve a little pain, but the family and the business will benefit enormously in the long run.

RELATED NEWS

FB Roundup: Harvey Weinstein, Warren Buffett, and Tata Sons

Family office c-suite salaries up but few women at the top-tier

FB Roundup: Lotte, Kraft Heinz, and Sir Pat Goodman

Analysis: The best laid plans

Top 10 principles of family business succession: part one of two

THIS WEEK'S NEWS

Grasp the nettle to secure the future of your family business

Why you should not ignore two billion millennial consumers

Success grows on family trees

FB Roundup: Harvey Weinstein, Bacardi, and Pentland Group

Family businesses power growth in India but uncertainty over succession

RELATED ADVISORS

Relative Solutions

Mishcon de Reya

Merrill Lynch Wealth Management

Smith & Williamson

Kaiser Partner

Withers Bergman

Continuity Family Business Consulting

Kellogg School of Management

de Visscher & Co

Edgar Brandt Advisory SA

RELATED CONTENT:

Governing and professionalising your family business to success
The factors fuelling global family office growth

About the Author »

Rosalyn Breezy

Corporate and financial services partner at Wedlake Bell

Rosalyn Breezy is corporate and financial services partner at Wedlake Bell.

Login or register to post comments

Related terms: blended family businesses, brand value, family legacy, family shareholders, FB News, succession, succession planning, Family Business, Succession

FAMILY BUSINESS CONFERENCES
FAMILY OFFICE CONFERENCES
FAMILY WEALTH CONFERENCES
SPONSORSHIP OPPORTUNITIES
QUALIFY

FAMILY BUSINESS NEWS
FAMILY OFFICE NEWS
FAMILY WEALTH NEWS
ADVERTISE
REGISTER
SIGN IN

FAMILY BUSINESS RESEARCH
FAMILY OFFICE RESEARCH
FAMILY WEALTH RESEARCH

CONTACT US
PRIVACY POLICY
TERMS AND CONDITIONS
SITE MAP

ABOUT US
IPI

CampdenFB.com is a wholly owned subsidiary of Campden Wealth.
© 2001-2017 CampdenFB.com. All rights reserved. Your use of this site is governed by the Terms and Conditions.

